Francheska Dimitri from GNN interviews Marshall briefly.

FRANCHESKA

Mr. Grant, How are you today, sir?

MARSHALL

I'm doing very well, Ms. Dimitri.

FRANCHESKA

Indeed! Indeed! So you are now the Democratic candidate for President of the United States for the 2020 election. I mean, millions of things have to be going through your mind. But what most people want to know is how do you feel?

MARSHALL (pauses then speaks)

I feel what we all feel; I feel great (with loud enthusiasm)

Francheska nods, then continues.

FRANCHESKA

Well, with this block out of your way, I got to ask, how will you distinguish yourself from the Republican platform as your former opponent Carver Monroe stated?

END

Marshall swallowed hard, closed his eyes, focusing on how L.A. had noted he needed to be prepared. He looks over at LA who nods.

MARSHALL

(looking between Francheska and the camera) Well, Francheska, I feel that Carver Monroe was absolutely right as far as referring to my Republican roots. However, he missed the fact that we as politicians can evolve, not be stagnant. Now, you have people like Trump who really are nothing but opportunists and never understood politics; they just had enough money to make trouble then buy their way into history. I am far from such a man. It is true that my father is one of the most respected Republican leaders ever in American
